

2003 CSAS Annual Meeting Report

July 9, 2003

The 2003 meeting slated for Saskatoon, Sk. Marks a significant step for the society. It is the first time (to our knowledge) that the society will host its own annual meeting independent of other organizations such as AIC. As such its success will pave the way for future meetings. Planning for the 2003 conference is well under way. The local organizing committee is committed to delivering a high quality program that will attract both Canadian and hopefully international scientists, as well as those involved in industry and government. We have included on the committee a member of the Animal Nutrition Council of Canada (SK division) and are working hand in hand with this group to attract their members. The Western Poultry Group will also meet in conjunction with this meeting. A tentative program is attached with a series of symposiums planned. Fund raising has started. A draft budget is also attached. Any questions can be directed to P. Thacker or J. McKinnon or through Shannon Scott.
